

Star Theatre to Reopen Today

After a shutdown for several days, during which extensive improvements have been made, the Star theatre, at East First South and State streets, reopens today. This theatre has been beautifully redecorated, new comfortable chairs have been installed and the new house is twice its original size. Among the many improvements is a real innovation in the installing of a glass front nursery room, where mothers may take their babies should they become fretful and at the same time not be deprived of the pleasure of seeing the show. The headline attraction for the Star's opening is Warren Kerrigan in Sabitini's masterpiece sea drama, "Captain Blood." Many more interesting units are included, making in all a remarkable entertainment.
